Many homes left without key service

Helen Pike Metro | Calgary

Houses are sprouting up in Calgary's newest suburbs faster than the Internet.

Some residents in areas like Legacy, in the city's deep south, are moving into newly built homes and finding out that high-speed Internet access isn't available.

Duncan Smail, senior development manager with Westcreek Developments, the company behind Legacy, said the problem is more common than some

"I think when you sign on to purchase a new home that you would expect telephone and Internet will be part of that service package — just like you get electricity and power," said Smail, noting that's not always the case.

"My understanding is this isn't unique to Legacy," he added. "It's spread across the entire development industry in Calgary."

Smail said he's aware of about 50 homes in Legacy without Internet access.

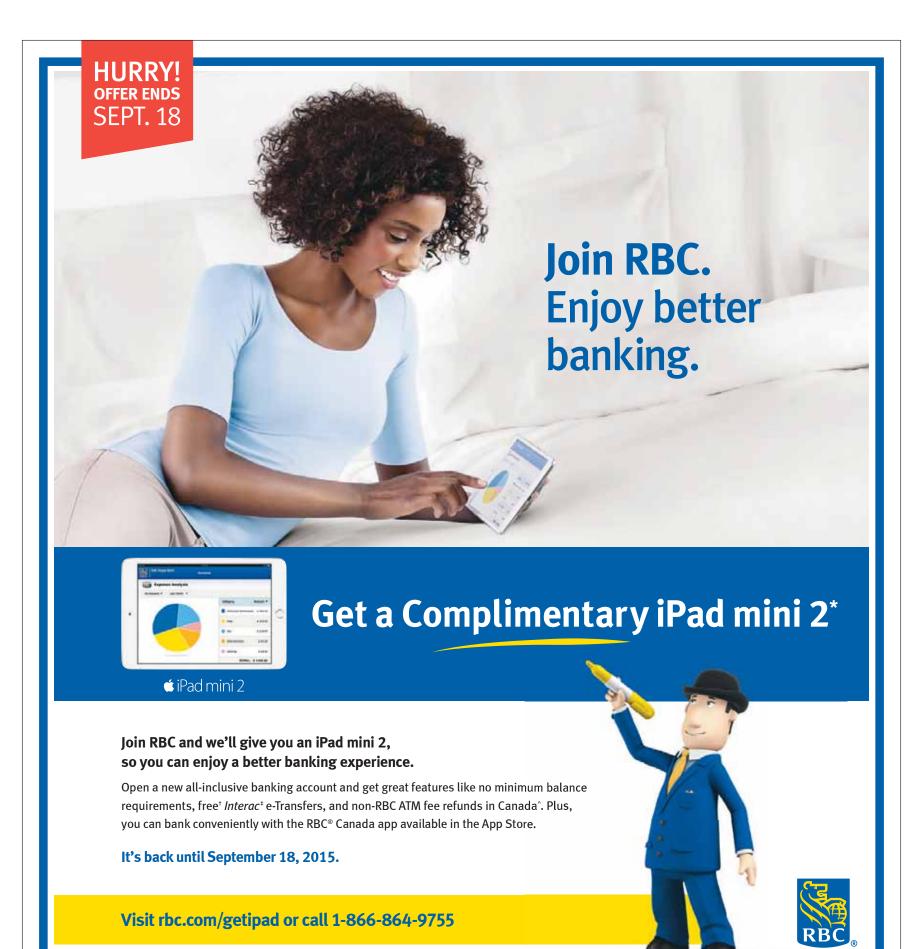

Internet providers like Telus and Shaw told Metro they are doing what they can to get service in these areas.

"We currently have our fibre infrastructure in place in Legacy to support the existing subdivision," a Shaw spokesperson said in an email. "We are working to install additional infrastructure in the area to provide residents in newer areas of Legacy with access to our service. We expect this installation to be completed by the end of this month.

Project aims to get women into management roles

IMMIGRANTS

Daycare pilot program in development

Chatha Metro | Calgary

The Calgary Immigrant Women's Association is working on a new project to help immigrant women in the fastfood industry move into management roles.

The hope is to remove one of the biggest barriers these women face: finding adequate childcare while working non-traditional hours.

"Providing childcare outside of traditional hours, in a way that works for the women and families, has been a longstanding issue," said Joan Chernoff, manager of employment services at the Calgary Immigrant Women's Association.

"As it stands, to move into a management position requires a greater sense of flexibility and availability in their scheduling," added Eleah Reimer, project coordinator.

Reimer is working with Thornhill Child Care Society to develop childcare models for the early morning and late evening, to be used by childcare centres in a pilot program.

"We're hoping when offering these models of childcare, that mothers will be able to find the childcare easily accessible, so they can make themselves more available to their work schedule," Reimer said.

They are planning to launch a pilot program in 2016. The focus is on the fast-food industry as it offers a number of entry-level jobs, especially for women who are newcomers to the country.

"Traditionally," the mother typically carries the weight of the children, their needs and finding childcare," said Chernoff. "In the case of immigrant women working Calgary, who face even more barriers, we are curious to see if this would create less barriers to move up in their field."

Currently, the organization is scouting locations, talking to focus groups and gathering information to launch the pilot program.

Pride upholds Joan Crockatt's parade participation

Pride Calgary says it will welcome Calgary Centre Conservative candidate Joan Crockatt to march in its parade next month, despite her vote against a federal bill on gender-identity rights.

Organizers of the annual Pride Parade, which now requires participants to sign a "declaration of support for the LGBTQA community," said Crockatt was already an "approved entrant" when it was brought to their attention that she had voted in opposition to Bill C-279.

The private member's bill would amend the Canadian Human Rights Act to include gender identity as a prohibited ground of discrimination. It was passed by the House of Commons, with some amendments, and is currently before the Senate.

Pride organizers said they reached out to Crockatt and discussed the reasons for her vote against the bill and were satisfied with her response.

"This discussion revealed that the opposition vote was made after consultation with Egale Canada, a national human rights trust focused on promoting LG-BTQA human rights, and one that has been a strong advocate for the passing of Bill C-279 without amendments," Pride said in a statement.

"Joan Crockatt expressed that she did not feel the amended bill was effective to protect the Trans* community, and opted to vote in opposition in order to ensure a better gender identity rights bill is formed."

Pride introduced the "declaration of support" after last year's parade in an effort to prevent what it described as disingenuous participation from some people, particularly politicians.

"By participating in a parade for pride it means that you are participating in the parade or festival because you want to support our organization and support our community," spokesperson Tansy Wong said when Metro first reported on the new declaration in May. "If you turn around and do something that shows you are not supporting that then ... we have a document saying you will support us."

Four dead, 15 injured in crashes

Police say four young Albertans, all under the age of 30, were killed in a devastating, multi-wehicle collision west of Jasper that injured another 15 people.

Those killed include an 18-year-old man from Carvel, a 28-year-old man from Spruce Grove, a 22-year-old woman from Peace River, and a 21-year-old man from Edmonton, according to Jasper RCMP.

Police said "initial indications" suggest an eastbound pickup truck collided with several oncoming vehicles, including a westbound pickup truck, on Highway 16 late Friday night, near the Alberta-B.C. border.

According to the RCMP the male driver of the eastbound pickup truck was killed and the three occupants of the westbound pickup truck — two men and one woman — were also killed.

Five vehicles are believed to have been involved in the collision altogether but the cause of the crash remains under investigation and RCMP said it may take a long time to sort out exactly what happened. Another 15 people suffered injuries in the series of collisions, which shut the highway down for hours as paramedics responded to the wounded and police investigated.

"The injured parties were treated for varying degrees of injuries at area hospitals," RCMP said in a release.

Heavy rain was reported in the area at the time.

Officers from Jasper are receiving assistance from the RCMP Collision Reconstruction Unit and the Edmonton Medical Examiner's Office as part of the investigation.

'A great opportunity' for resource reclamation

ENTREPRENEURSHIP

Initiative aims for more reuse of construction materials

Krista Sylvester For Metro | Calgary

As far as ideas go, this one is almost as organic as they get.

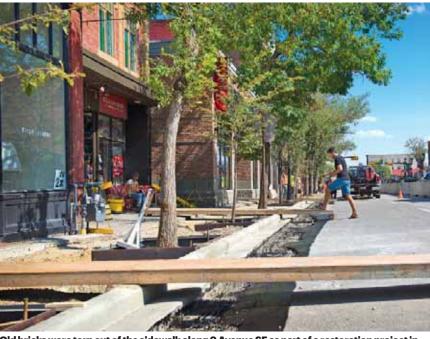

It started with a concerned citizen taking initiative after witnessing a missed opportunity to recycle used construction resources.

It took Inglewood entrepreneur Jacquie Aquines just one day to spring into action when she saw a city-led construction project forgo the chance to recycle or donate used sidewalk bricks from 9 Avenue SE — in this case to a group fundraising for patio blocks just down the street.

While the city was removing bricks from the busy sidewalk and putting them into trash bins, just half a block away there was a fundraiser by the Inglewood Lawn Bowling Club, and both groups were unaware about what the other was doing.

Aquines asked the crew where the bricks were going and they told her to the trash.

The very resource they were fundraising for was sent to the Old bricks were torn out of the sidewalk along 9 Avenue SE as part of a restoration project in Inglewood and due for the trash heap. Jacquie Aquines wants to help connect those looking to obtain or dispose of such materials through #ReclaimMeYYC. JENNIFER FRIESEN/FOR METRO landfill. It's ironic and sad," Aquines said, adding it was simply a case of a lack of communication.

While she doesn't blame the city for the missed opportunity, she said she hopes in the future situations like this can be avoided.

That's why she created the #ReclaimMeYYC hashtag on Twitter and Facebook and even created the website Reclaim-MeYYC.org.

There is a great opportunity for communication between city construction initiatives, business owners and the community to mobilize a path of redistribution of the reclaimable material.'

For the city's part, even though it strongly encourages private companies to reuse and recycle construction materials when possible, there doesn't seem to be an official policy in place forcing the city to do the same.

Roads communications advisor Chris McGeachy says some of the bricks were removed by hand and put on a pallet to be used by the city at a later date, while others would have been trashed if the city couldn't use them again. He said he isn't aware of a policy when it comes to removing materials such as bricks.

"I believe the material disposal is at the discretion of the contractor," he said. "I think there are rules in place for not just giving them away.

Calgary Waste and Recycling communication supervisor Blaire Riddle said the city's business unit pays the same rate as everyone for waste, which is $110 a tonne for the basic rate and $165 a tonne for materials that could be recycled, including bricks and other designated construction materials.

'The idea is that you could have recycled this and saved yourself some money, so that's the mindset of the designated materials rate," Riddle said. "We're trying to encourage them to recycle these materials by charging a higher rate for them.'

Aquines has been in touch with Ward 9 Coun. Gian-Carlo Carra's office and is working closely with Acclaimed Trading Co. to put an initiative in place to help connect people in the community looking to get rid of or obtain construction materials that can be reused.

"I think #ReclaimMeYYC is a great first step but it will take co-operation from everyone to make it work," she said.

IV bag may have attracted wasps

An entomologist says a Calgary hospital patient's IV bag might have played a role in attracting the wasps the man claims stung him two dozen times during an evening

Rob Longair of the University of Calgary says the wasps may have mistaken the bag for a pool of water, which they would have been seeking to cool their nest following the hot, dry weather.

Randy Purdy says he was in the courtyard of the Foothills Medical Centre on Tuesday night when he noticed he was standing next to a wasps' nest.

Purdy says he ran for it, but the wasps chased him inside the front door and all the way into the lobby.

He says he informed hospital staff of the location of the nest, but Alberta Health Services says there have been no complaints about wasps at the Foothills Hospital.

Purdy says his head was swollen and he suffered stings to his neck, groin and feet.

"It was a swarm of yellow jackets," said Purdy. "I just started running; they were all over me."

"When I took my shirt off, they were stuck to my skin. I was flashing them off."

AHS officials say a report of a wasp nest would result in the immediate removal of the offending nest from hospital grounds.

HISTORY

Mountie embodies all those who shaped city

Simes
For Metro | Calgary

After spending 15 years stashed away in a storage facility in Bearspaw, Fort Calgary's newest sculpture, Mountie on Horseback, has finally seen the light.

Greeting pedestrians on the east side of the Elbow River Traverse, Mountie on Horseback nicely ties Fort Calgary's two sites — the Barracks and the Deane House — together, said Tim van Wijk, the organization's facilities operations manager.

"I think (the statue) becomes an icon for tying the two sides of the site together, "van Wijk said. "We're hoping it'll become an icon along the bike path."

What took so long for the statue to be installed?

The timing and location had

Imagine having the fortitude to stay and build this city.

Tim van Wijk

to be perfect, van Wijk said, adding it was the new pedestrian bridge (Elbow River Traverse) that drove the momentum to install the statue.

Unlike Fort Calgary's statue of Col. James MacLeod, Mountie on Horseback doesn't resemble a specific person. Rather, it embodies all Mounties and their contributions to shaping Calgary back in 1875, van Wijk said.

"Imagine having the fortitude to stay and build this city," he said. "All the Mounties were civic leaders for Calgary at the time."

Once the statues's final touches are complete, van Wijk said a line of text scribed on the plinth will read, "What was it like to stand in a wide open prairie and imagine this city?"

He said he hopes that message will let Calgarians know that anything is possible, even building a metropolis from scratch.

The instillation is part of Fort Calgary's $36.3-million Master Plan project.

Cast in bronze, Mountie on Horseback was made by famous Alberta sculptor Harry O'Hanlon, whose estate donated the piece to Fort Calgary.

Before being stored in Bearspaw, it was seen at baggage claim in the Calgary International airport from 1995 to 2000.

The sculpture also has a twin, which can be found near the Banff Springs Hotel.

Warning issued over shellfish bacteria

The number of illnesses connected to eating raw shellfish from British Columbia has climbed to 67 cases in that province and in Alberta.

The Public Health Agency of Canada said 48 cases have been recorded in B.C., and 19 people have become ill in the neighbouring province since June 1.

The agency issued a public health notice Friday, saying it is collaborating with provincial and federal health officials, the Canadian Food Inspection Agency and the Department of Fisheries and Oceans to investigate the outbreak.

The naturally occurring bacteria that's been linked to raw oysters from B.C. can be present during periods of increased water temperatures.

Alberta Health Services issued a warning Friday encouraging Albertans to cook their shellfish to reduce the risk of getting sick.

The Vancouver Coastal Health authority issued an order earlier this week that restaurants must cook all oysters harvested in the province before serving them.

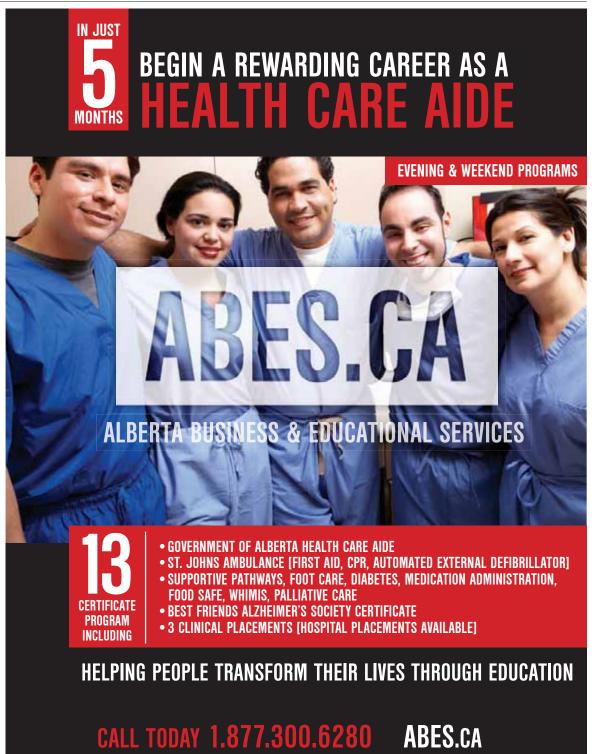

Elderly people, infants, pregnant women and those with underlying health conditions are most at risk for the illness with symptoms including diarrhea, nausea, vomiting, fever and headaches.

To reduce that risk, Alberta Health Services advises that people eat only properly cooked shellfish, that they discard any shellfish that doesn't open when cooked and avoid eating seafood when taking antacids, because reduced stomach acid may allow the bacteria to survive and grow in the intestinal tract.

Illness symptoms typically last for three days to a week and usually don't require any treatment.

The public health notice said one person was hospitalized because of the illness.

ST. PATRICK'S ISLAND

South-facing chutes shut down till solution found

Helen Pike Metro | Calgary

Opening day at St. Patrick's Island didn't quite go off without a hitch.

The Calgary Municipal Land Corporation (CMLC) received a call through 311 that prompted officials to shut down a southfacing metal slide for the foreseeable future.

A child who attempted to use the slide was reportedly burned to the point of blistering after the metal heated up under the sweltering hot sun.

"We haven't had direct contact with the parents the family or the child, obviously, but in this case we took immediate action," said Susan Veres of CMLC. "We will make sure that the health and welfare of the child and our guests are paramount in all of what we do here."

"It's been really hot and these are not plastic slides, and so what we're doing now is were trying to with limited information we're just trying to figure it out what can be done to avoid something like this in the future."

Dana Wheatley, the blogger behind Calgary Playground Review, said the slide's design should have been a red flag to developers before opening.

"South-facing metal slides getting hot are a known problem, and I'm surprised that this was overlooked when it is such a major part of the playground design," Wheatley said in an email. "It's important for kids to be able to take some reasonable risks in their play but going down hot slides isn't part of that!"

Veres said the developer team is now looking into alternatives like specific coatings for the slides, a canopy for shade, or vegetation designed to cast shadows on the metal surface.

She added that, so far, feedback for the park has been good but CMLC is treating the first few months as a soft launch before September comes, and is looking to improve on any flaws until then.

"I cannot tell you the degree of compliments the park is receiving. It seems to be that Calgarian's have fallen in love with the place," said Veres. "Really, it's been overwhelming for us."

The only other complaint CMLC fielded was a lack of signage — which they are working to rectify.

As with any public concerns or bylaw issues, Veres said contacting 311 is the way to go.

... I'm surprised that this was overlooked when it is such a major part of the playground design.

The former police chief helped introduce Naidoo to a crowd of supporters at Symons Valley Ranch.

"Her commitment and her willingness to step up to run for the Liberals in Calgary Rocky View is because she wants to do the right thing," Hanson said. "She wants to represent people, she wants to represent their interests and she wants to do what's right for everybody."

In a statement, Naidoo said she met with the former chief after winning the nomination for the newly created riding, which resulted from redistricting since the last federal election.

Naidoo said she has a great deal of respect for Hanson and is proud to have her support campaign.

"I think there's a myth out there that all PCs are federally conservative," she said. "There are a lot of PCs out there who are actually federally Liberal, so at the end of the day I knew that Rick was very progressive and it's about being progressive."

Hanson lost by just 100 votes to NDP candidate Ricardo Miranda in the provincial constituency of Calgary-Cross.

Rugby players are classified between 0.5 to 3.5. The higher the number, the better the mobility. Madell, who lost his legs and fingers to a staph infection when he was 10 years old, is a 3.5. The low-point players mainly run interference for the goal-scorers.

The Canadians' victory, in front of a full house at the Hershey Centre in Mississauga, Ont., clinched them a spot in the Paralympics next summer Madell said Canada's chef de mission Elisabeth Walker-Young informed Madell of the flag-bearer honour in the dressing room after the game.

"It's been truly such an hon-

Calgarian connects with kids through dance, drama

The 23-year-old half-Trinidadian, half-Romanian said being able to connect with her Caribbean roots in an artistic way "is so fulfilling."

It really helps with selfbuilding and identity building," she said. "It is something that I am really confident in sharing and teaching within my community."

Comanescu runs the nonprofit youth group started by her mother 14 years ago, called Diversity Performing Arts Club of Calgary (DPACC).

The group teaches kids through dance, drama and

"It is just a really positive space for youth to come together," said Comanescu, who got her start as a performer dancing in the group.

"Dance is a very big vehicle in showcasing what the designers have designed and the spirit of the costumes," she said.

Comanescu said one of the best parts of her job is being able to choreograph routines for DPACC and others.

"It is fun to create a picture, create a dreamscape for the audience," she said. "It is totally fulfilling for me.'

If you want to be a part of one of Comanescu's routines, you can do so by taking one of her classes. She teaches dancehall on Mondays at Pulse Studios from 8:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. and SoCa on Tuesdays at DJD from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Comanescu, as well as DPACC, will be preforming Aug. 22 at Carifest Calgary at Shaw Millennium Park.

City program focuses on inclusive philosophy

Lucie Edwardson Metro | Calgary

They only met five days earlier, but on Saturday, participants in Girls Rock Camp Calgary showed the wall-to-wall crowd at the Ship and Anchor Pub what true rock stars look like.

For the third year, Calgary girls between the ages of 12 and 17 were able to attend a camp centered around being female in the music industry.

Over five days, they learned about song writing, how to promote their bands and studied women in pop culture.

But, from talking to the girls, it was clear the lessons go much deeper than that.

"It is a lot about empowering women and being a community," said 13-yearold Kendall Scully. "There is also so much feminism rooted into it, which is so great, and we just jam out and hangout with our friends."

Twelve-year-old Sophia Roddick said the camp taught her a lot about being in the music industry but also to accept people for who they are and what they like to do.

"We talked about just letting people do what makes them happy because at the end of the day if they like what they are doing that is all that matters," she said.

Camp founder Nicola Lefevre and staff members Miesha Louie and Robyn Pape said they were so proud of the girls and what they had accomplished during the week that they were close to tears before their performances Saturday.

"I feel like my heart is going to explode, it is so amazing," said Pape.

Lefevre said the key to success at the camp is their "all-init-together" philosophy, and focusing on kindness and respect.

Many decrepit utility boxes sprinkled across Calgary will soon receive a splash of colour.

As part of the the city's Utility Box Program, the community of Southwood chose Bram Timmer to revamp its utility box at Elbow Drive and Southampton Drive SW.

Timmer said he will wrap his art piece around the box using vinyl.

The concept has yet to be determined, as he and Southwood community members must agree on the image.

But after Timmer met with community members, discussions between the two parties have been smooth sailing, said Southwood Community Association President Vivien Jonathan.

Timmer said his concept will bridge contemporary art characteristics with traditional methods, essentially creating a sense of belonging for Southwood's old and young.

Consequently, bridging generation gaps through art tends to be a challenge, Timmer said.

The main challenge is how to do that without having your art only focussing on the past or only focussing on the future." However, Timmer said engaging with community members almost always relieves the artistic tension.

As it turns out, the community seems to be largely receptive to his ideas, Jonathan said.

"Bram was just great," she said. "He was very sensitive to what we've done and what we would like to do going forward."

Once the project is complete by Sept. 30, Jonathan said she hopes Southwood community members see themselves portrayed through Timmer's art.

Harper rivals keep spotlight on Duffy

ELECTION 2015

Prime Minister denies parallel to sponsorship scandal

Stephen Harper called any comparison between the Mike Duffy affair and the Liberal sponsorship scandal "absurd" as the Conservative leader faced more questions on Sunday from reporters and attacks from his opponents about the senator.

The Duffy issue stayed in the election campaign spotlight after revelations emerged last week during the senator's fraud, breach of trust and bribery trial.

Harper was reminded Sunday by a reporter how he wouldn't accept claims years ago that former Liberal prime minister Jean Chrétien and then-finance minister Paul Martin knew nothing about the sponsorship scandal in the 1990s.

The Tory leader was then asked to explain the difference between that situation and the Duffy affair, which Harper has insisted he knew nothing about.

"Look, in the Liberal sponsorship scandal $40 million of Canadian taxpayers' (money) disappeared," Harper said.

"So, I think the comparison is absurd.

"This case we have a senator whose expenses, in our judgment, were not justifiable and my response was that he should pay those expenses back."

Harper's rivals sought to keep the Duffy issue alive on Sunday as the campaign entered its third week.

Liberal Leader Justin Trudeau sent an open letter to Harper, demanding explanations to alleged contradictions and inconsistencies in his statements, and those of some of his cabinet ministers.

In the letter, Trudeau also called on Harper to fire members of his team who were allegedly involved in a Duffy coverup.

On Oct. 19, Canadians will get a chance to fire that person responsible for the whole mess — and that is Stephen Harper.

Thomas Mulcair

"Mr. Harper continues to ignore the calls for answering questions, for explaining why he keeps these people who have been involved in part of a coverup to hide the truth from Canadians — why he continues to keep them around him, indeed, running his campaign," Trudeau told reporters in Montreal, where he attended a Pride event.

Last week, Harper said the "vast majority" of his staff were unaware of a scheme to fake Duffy's personal repayment of Senate expenses. The statement marked a shift from Harper's previous position that only one person was aware.

One of the people informed about the plan by Harper's thenchief of staff, Nigel Wright, to repay Duffy's expenses was Ray Novak, Harper's current chief of staff, close confidant and a senior Conservative Party campaign director.

New Democrat Leader Thomas Mulcair was asked Sunday whether some of Harper's staffers should lose their jobs over the Duffy scheme.

"Well, I think somebody should be fired for the whole Duffy-Wright affair," Mulcair said in Montreal, where he also attended the Pride event.

Parties want to fight terrorism with Canada, get off blacklist

Two political parties in the Middle East designated as terror groups by Canada predict the Islamic State movement won't survive and question why they're blacklisted when cooperation could defeat the common enemy.

Representatives of both Hezbollah and Hamas in Lebanon have demned ISIL in rare meetings with The Canadian Press.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper has denounced the jihadist militants, a position he has used to buttress Canada's involvement in the U.S.-led coalition conducting airstrikes in Iraq and Syria.

Experts at odds on Canada's drone rules

Experts say Canada's permissive approach to regulating commercial drones has made it a world leader in the burgeoning field, while others warn that inadequate enforcement of the soaring number of amateur flyers is putting the public at risk.

People have been increasingly taking to the skies now that recreational drones are more affordable than ever.

That upswing in popularity, the lack of public-awareness campaigns and skimpy enforcement efforts have put the unmanned aircraft on a collision course with their manned counterparts.

A rise in incidents involving recreational drones interfering with planes and helicopters has some calling for Transport Canada to sanction unlawful recreational drone users.

"Public awareness and enforcement is lacking," said Ernie Zeisman, president of a drone training outfit in the British Columbia Interior. "They need to begin clamping down."

Currently, a recreational pilot operating a drone weighing less than 35 kilograms doesn't require either a licence or a special permit to fly but must follow a list of Transport Canada safety guidelines.

These include stipulations such as staying nine kilometres from an airport, flying below 90 metres and always keeping their craft within eyesight.

Zeisman said a shortage of resources are mostly to blame for the lack of enforcement.

Commercial drones - officially referred to as unmanned air vehicles, or UAVs — are a different matter, he said.

"Commercial operators very much stick to the regulations and want to be responsible," said Zeisman. "They don't want to lose their licence." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Suspect dies as manhunt ends

CALIFORNIA

Alleged killer may have shot himself after confrontation

An 18-day manhunt in the mountainous high desert of central California ended when two deputies opened fire on a man who pulled out a handgun during a confrontation on a rural road, authorities said Sunday.

Benjamin Peter Ashley, 34, was struck by several rounds after he failed to comply with orders to drop the weapon as he walked toward foothills east of Bakersfield on Saturday, Kern County Sheriff Donny Youngblood told The Associated Press.

weapon on himself after being shot by the deputies, Youngblood said. An autopsy planned for Monday will determine the cause of death.

"He either died from his injuries, or he shot himself and died. It's hard to confirm at this point," Youngblood said.

Three other weapons, including a pair of .44-calibre handguns, were found on Ashley's person and in a backpack he was carrying, the sheriff said.

The confrontation came after the owner of a rural convenience store reported a man matching Ashley's description had come in and bought about $100 worth

Dozens of deputies and officers from various agencies had been searching in remote terrain about 50 kilometres east of Bakersfield for Ashley, who was described as a homeless man. He is suspected of killing a retired dentist, taking three men hostage and wounding two deputies.

Youngblood said detectives were searching for a motive, "but why he did what he did may never be known."

railroad crossing.

A small, single-engine plane crashed on to a Long Island railroad crossing Sunday, killing the pilot, injuring a passenger and shutting down service on a branch of the nation's busiest commuter rail line, officials said.

The plane crashed at a railway crossing between the Hicksville and Bethpage stations of the Long Island Rail Road around 7:45 a.m., authorities said.

Residents of a nearby senior living facility said they heard a loud noise crashed on to a Long Island and saw the craft on fire.

Bystanders ran to the scene but had to get back because of the flames, Charles Terzano told Newsday.
"It just melted," he said. "It was a horror, a real horror."

The name of the pilot was not immediately released. The passenger, identified as Carl Giordano, 55, of New Vernon, New Jersey, had a broken jaw, cuts and bruises, Metropolitan Transportation Authority spokesman Salvatore Arena said.

Giordano was undergoing surgery Sunday afternoon.

The impact left "a pile of metal that was burning," said

Hicksville Fire Department First Assistant Chief Richard Diaz. One of the wings had been torn off, and the other mangled with the body of the plane, Diaz said.

The Federal Aviation Administration said the Hawker Beechcraft BE35 had departed from Francis Gabreski Airport in Westhampton Beach. The pilot reported an issue and was trying to get to Republic Airport in Farmingdale at the time of Charles Terzano, describing the crash, acthe wreckage of a plane that cording to the FAA. The craft crashed about three miles (five kilometres) northwest of Republic.

Arena said LIRR service on the Ronkonkoma branch had been suspended in both directions. He said the bulk of the plane had been removed by Sunday afternoon, and LIRR workers would be cutting away damaged track sections and replacing them. He said it was still unclear what impact the crash would have on Monday's morning commute.

The FAA said the National Transportation Safety Board would determine the cause of the crash.

🛑 IN BRIEF

Jamaican narcs execute major pot bust

Jamaican narcotics agents have seized a lot of marijuana found in two shipping containers at wharves in the nation's capital.

In a Sunday statement, Jamaican police say investigators found 10 duffel bags containing over 1,000 pounds of compressed marijuana in a container destined for Suriname.

Another 75 pounds were discovered in a container headed to the Netherlands.

No arrests were made. Jamaica is believed to be the Caribbean's largest producer and exporter of pot.

Plants are grown mostly on the sides of mountains, swampy areas or hidden among other crops.

Drug law amendments earlier this year partially decriminalized the possession of small amounts of pot in Jamaica.

Authorities, however, have not softened their stance on transnational drug trafficking or cultivation of illegal marijuana plots.

SAVANNAH RIVER

Vessel is an example of the first armoured warships

After 150 years at the bottom of the Savannah River, the armoured skeleton of the Confederate warship CSS Georgia is being raised to the surface one five-ton chunk at a time.

Navy divers who began working in late June to recover cannons, unexploded shells and other artifacts from the riverbed finally started midweek on their last major task: Retrieving an estimated 113,400 kilograms of the Civil War ironclad's armoured siding.

The CSS Georgia was scuttled by its own crew to prevent Gen. William T. Sherman from capturing the massive gunship when his Union troops took Savannah in December 1864 from forces supporting the secessionist Confederacy of pro-slavery southern states. Still classified as a captured enemy vessel by the Navy, the remains of the Confederate ironclad are being salvaged as part of a $703 million deepening of the Savannah harbour for cargo ships.

"The historical significance is evident in everything we do," Chief Warrant Officer Jason Potts, the Navy's on-scene commander, said Wednesday as his crew prepared to start raising the first of three giant slabs of armour.

The CSS Georgia was a crude example of the first armoured warships designed during the Civil War to stand up to cannon and artillery fire. Its 1,200ton frame was built using three layers of timber topped with 7.2-metre strips of railroad iron.

Having sections of the Georgia's armour for study should reveal more about how the Confederacy compensated for the South's lack of an industrial base when it came to building ships and other war machines.

"A lot of these ironclads are built by house carpenters, they're not built by shipwrights," said Jeff Seymour, historian and curator for the National Civil War Naval Museum in Columbus. "So what are the construction techniques? They vary from ship to ship."

The Georgia proved so bulky its own engines were too weak to propel it against the Savannah River's currents. The Confederates anchored the ironclad off Old Fort Jackson as a floating gun battery. It was sunk without ever firing a shot in combat. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

White supremacist's murder trial to begin

A capital murder trial will begin this week for a Missouri man who claims he was morally obligated to kill three people last year outside two suburban Kansas City Jewish sites.

Frazier Glenn Miller Jr., a 74-year-old avowed white supremacist, has publicly acknowledged firing the shots that killed 69-year-old William Corporon; ȟis 14-year-old grandson, Reat Griffin Underwood; and 53-year-old Terri LaManno on April 13, 2014, in Johnson County, Kansas. He said he was trying to target Jewish people; he didn't know that none of the victims was Iewish.

Attorneys expect jury selection, which starts Monday, to take a week and the rest of the trial to last three to four weeks, court administrator Katherine Stocks said.

Already, the pre-trial hearings for Miller have been eventful, with a judge warning that Miller's frequent outbursts could result in a mistrial if they happen in front of jurors.

Facing a possible death sentence, Miller fired his three court-appointed attorneys in May because he said he didn't trust them and wanted to speak for himself. Johnson County Judge Thomas Kelly Ryan allowed it, but ordered those lawyers to be standby counsel in case Miller is removed from the courtroom. During several lengthy hearings since, Miller has interrupted the judge and made disparaging comments about the court or prosecutors.

The judge also rejected Miller's "compelling necessity" defence, in which the Aurora, Mo., man planned to argue that Jewish people were taking over the country and it was his moral duty to stop it. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN

Trump targets Mexicans in policy

The U.S. presidential campaign of Donald Trump has entered a new phase: that of releasing a few policy specifics spelling out how he'd govern.

In an indication the reality star-businessman intends his presidential run to be more than a mere celebrity stunt, he's hired staff in early primary states and he released his first platform paper Sunday.

The eight-page paper on immigration threatens the Mexican government, the business community and millions of families living in the U.S. under uncertain legal status.

One section explains how he would build a multibillion-dollar wall across the southern border of the U.S. and get the Mexican government to pay for it.

Trump says he'd apply financial pressure until the Mexicans pay up. He says he'd impound cross-border remittance payments linked to illegal wages; hike fees for work visas for Mexican CEOs and diplomats; and increase fees for border-crossing cards and NAFTA worker visas from Mexico.

He would triple the number of U.S. immigration officers; end job visas for foreign students; defund so-called sanctuary cities that shelter undocumented migrants; detain and deport undocumented migrants; suspend the granting of green cards until more unemployed Americans enter the work force; and end automatic citizenship for babies born in the U.S.

Trump has also said he'd undo President Barack Obama's executive orders, including one that granted residency rights to the children of people who entered the U.S. illegally.

Those actions would affect millions of people.

Local villagers report seeing aircraft crash into mountain

An airliner carrying 54 people went missing Sunday during a short flight in bad weather in Indonesia's mountainous easternmost province of Papua, and rescuers were heading to an area where villagers reported seeing a plane crash into a mountain, officials said.

The Trigana Air Service plane was flying from Papua's provincial capital, Jayapura, to the Papua city of Oksibil when it lost contact with Oksibil's airport, said Transportation Ministry spokesman Julius Barata. There was no indication that the pilot had made a distress call, he said.

The ATR42-300 twin turboprop plane was carrying 49 passengers and five crew members on the scheduled 42-minute journey, Barata said. Five children, including two infants, were among the passengers.

Local media reports said all the passengers are Indonesians. The airline did not immediately release a passenger manifest.

Lethal sodium cyanide in Tianjin blasts

Authorities pulled more bodies from a massive blast site at China's Tianjin port, pushing the death toll to 112 on Sunday as teams rushed to clear dangerous chemicals and prosecutors prepared an investigation into those responsible for the disaster.

More than 700 people were injured and 95 people — including dozens of firefighters — are missing after a fire and rapid succession of blasts late Wednesday hit a warehouse for hazardous chemicals in a mostly industrial area of Tianjin, 120 kilometres east of Beijing.

The Tianjin explosions are among the deadliest industrial accidents in China. CHINATOPIX VIA THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

By Sunday, authorities confirmed there were "several hundred" tonnes of the toxic chemical sodium cyanide on the site at the time of the blasts, although they said there have not been any substantial leaks.

Sodium cyanide is a toxic chemical that can form a flammable gas upon contact with water, and several hundred tonnes would be a clear violation of rules cited by state media that the warehouse could store no more than 10 tonnes at a time.

Tianjin officials have ordered a citywide check on any potential safety risks and violation of fire rules, mandating suspension of operations for factories that cannot immediately comply with safety rules.

Government responds to pressure from people, cleric

Iraq's Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi on Sunday ordered his cabinet reduced from 33 members to just 22, consolidating the body as part of a major reform push in response to mass protests against corruption and poor governance.

The decision, announced by his office, would eliminate four ministries, including those of human rights and women's affairs, and consolidate others.

The move follows a farreaching reform plan approved by parliament last week that eliminated the country's three vice presidencies and three deputy prime ministers, as well as reducing the budget for the personal bodyguards of senior officials and transferring it to the interior and defence ministries.

Iragis have held massive protests in recent weeks against corruption and poor government services, focusing in particular on power outages that have made a recent heat wave even more unbearable.

Iraq's top Shiite cleric, Grand Ayatollah Ali al-Sistani, has lent his support to demands for reform, and parliament unanimously approved the wider reform plan last week in a dramatic show of unity for a country riven with sectarian and political rivalries.

Those reforms dismantled much of the top-heavy government erected in the years after the 2003 U.S.-led invasion that toppled Saddam Hussein. The three vice presidencies were intended to give equal representation to the country's Shiite majority and Sunni and Kurdish minorities.

Canadian beer giants set to fend off push by SABMiller

A beer war is brewing in Canada as SABMiller seeks to grow its presence following its divorce from partner Molson

"To say that we're going to overtake the two big boys would be a bit of stretch so I would be happy to settle in at No. 3," said general manager Paul Verdu.

To get there, SABMiller Canada hopes Miller Lite — available in Ontario and Newfoundland until 2010 - will steal market share from dominant players Coors Light and Bud Light.

Global demand for light beers has been growing. It accounts for about half of total beer sales in the U.S., but less than 30 per cent in Canada.

Beer market specialist Plato Logic estimates light beers account for 20 per cent of total beer volume and have been growing 2.1 per cent annually over the past five years.

Verdu sees opportunities for the "original" light beer -Miller Lite — if only the beermaker can convince Canadian drinkers to give it a try.

The company plans to spend heavily to promote its brands and hopes to get help by not charging Ontario bars and restaurants the hefty premium they face from all other brewers except Brick Brewing's Waterloo brand.

The move, which will amount to establishments paying the same amount that consumers fork out at the Beer Store, is an incentive for bars and restaurants to carry more SABMiller brands, says James Rilett, Ontario vice-president of industry association Restaurants Canada. He said bars and restaurants will save an average of $10 per case of beer, or almost $75 million annually.

Verdu said SABMiller is also trying to appeal to Canadian consumers by promoting the taste and features of its products instead of "gimmick marketing" that focuses on lifestyle advertising.

Merkel rules out reduction of Greek debt

German Chancellor Angela Merkel says there's no certainty the latest bailout for Greece will succeed but she is hopeful the country can overcome its economic crisis if it adheres to the agreements forged with its creditors.

Merkel also told German broadcaster ZDF on Sunday that Greece can't expect its debt to be cut.

The International Monetary Fund has insisted that Greece must be given some form of debt relief before it will participate in any new bailout, something Germany wants.

But Merkel said while repayment periods may be extended and interest rates can be tweaked, a so-called debt "haircut" is ruled out.

Dozens of lawmakers in Merkel's conservative bloc plan to oppose the new bailout package for Greece at a special session of Parliament.

This past Friday, finance ministers of the 19-nation euro single currency group approved the first 26 billion euros ($29 billion US) of a vast new bailout package to help rebuild Greece's shattered economy. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's also hard to find a reason to keep the eyesore

The primary argument for saving the building, which is completely derelict and beyond repair, is that Calgary does a horrible job of preserving its history. This may be true, but the Cecil Hotel is not the place to make this argument. Those hoping to make this a hill worth dying on are making one of Calgary's most embarrassing legacies a poster child for heritage preservation. It's also a very painful monument to a problem the city has yet to deal with effectively.

People can't be blamed for pointing out the non-seedy, more illustrious time in the Cecil's history, though they are irrelevant in a modern context. So what if it provided nice lodgings for the working man 80 years ago? Were there not other "clean bed, hot water, affordable" hotels at the time? So what if the Cecil was one of the first non-discriminating places gay Calgarians could kick back and enjoy a beer? These things were noteworthy, even commendable, at the time. But they don't make the Cecil an iconic structure.

The Cecil should come down for a few reasons, not the least of which is economic. Calgary taxpayers stand to profit off the sale of the site to a developer who would be crazy not to cash in on the East Village fever.

More importantly, maintaining such a monument to violence, addiction, and social depravity sandwiched between the Drop-In & Rehab Centre and the YWCA would be a constant salting of a wound many people in that area are working day by day to heal. Imagine restoring that hotel to its sandstone glory, only to have thrill-seeking hipsters pay top dollar on date night to sleep in the same place where survival sex workers were once tormented by the violent johns who fed their hand-to-mouth lifestyle. Preservation indeed.

We can preserve history without putting a gilded frame around a hideous stain. The Japanese just remembered the 70th anniversary of the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. They did it without a painful, commemorative flyover of the Enola Gay. That would have been crass.

The Cecil is crass. It will always be a part of Calgary's history, but it belongs in our memory, not in plain sight.

Why we resist and deny facts that don't match our beliefs

There are ideas, there are opinions, and there are harder-held beliefs.

And once a person gets hold of a few of these, it sometimes seems, they'll never let them go. As if there's no way to change a mind, and little interest in changing your own.

When I worked at a student newspaper, I had a conservative editor-in-chief. He was the first conservative I'd ever, knowingly, met.

Universities are hotbeds of liberalism, their newspapers among the most overtly political press in the country. He, you can imagine, was an

And yet we had some of the most interesting debates I've been party to. He made me think more clearly through his questions. He was far less dogmatic than the rest of us, far more curious, far less selfrighteous.

Writing a column should be fodder for a good debate. I've considered an issue, tried to figure out what I think, and why. I've tried to prod others to do the same. Making people angry might get clicks, but making people think is surely a better goal.

And yet sometimes I fear it's impossible. I fear we argue, and mistakenly romanticize it

I'm not sure that anyone who wants to debate my column with me ever really tried to understand me in the first place. And thus, I'm not sure I care to understand them.

I doubt anyone who likes a column likes it because I made them think differently. I more likely gave words to what they already believed.

What can really change a person's mind? Or can anything?

A 2014 New Yorker piece explored the research behind false beliefs — opinions held despite overwhelming evidence to the contrary and whether people who hold them can be convinced otherwise. It seems that "If information doesn't square with someone's prior beliefs, he discards the beliefs if they're weak and discards the information if the beliefs are

In other words, if you challenge something I hold dear, I'm far less likely to accept your argument, no matter how irrefutable it may be.

Researchers did find a hopeful loophole: If you make someone feel safe, if you don't appear to fundamentally threaten who they are, they more easily shed false beliefs.

I would add that changing minds — the purpose of debate — is impossible if you value thinking you're right over being right.

So maybe I should be asking for your effort to understand me, if you can muster it. Even on my angriest of days, I'd rather be wrong than ignorant.

Backyard fun: Quiet the dilemma

NEIGHBOURS

Complaints escalate the situation, so try having a conversation

Many would consider the sound of kids gleefully playing outdoors a natural soundtrack of the summer

But one family in Pickering, Ont., located east of Toronto, was told the sound of their kids splashing in their backyard pool was deemed unreasonably disruptive by a neighbour.

On the very first day of summer vacation, Danielle Honsberger said she received a card from the municipality concerning a neighbour's noise complaint. It was later followed by a formal written notice.

"We didn't even know that we had offended anybody, and if they had spoken directly to us, we could have avoided this whole situation," said Honsberger, a mother of three children, aged seven, nine and 11.

"I would have been embarrassed and very respectful and been on the noise right away — but they never gave us that opportunity.

"I am a parent who is very present and very mindful of how we are heard in the community."

Across the country, municipalities are frequently forced to intervene when residents file complaints about noise disrupting their peace and quiet.

In Ottawa, officials say a total of 6,152 noise-related complaints

Honsberger has received two noise complaints regarding her three children, ages 11, nine and seven, for being too loud in their backyard swimming pool. She says they are only home from about 4 to 6 p.m. each night to swim. SABRINA BYRNES/TORONTO STAR were filed to the city between the beginning of the year and Aug. 11, with just under half related to loud music and about 1,500 loud shouting.

In 2013, Saskatoon received 1,694 noise complaints and 1,268 complaints specifically about noisy parties.

While statistics were not available, Winnipeg officials said most noise complaints in that city are typically about the roar of construction machinery and neighbours' air conditioners.

Susan Logan, executive director of the non-profit Mediation & Restorative Justice Centre in Edmonton, said neighbour disputes represent the largest percentage of their caseload.

Issues arise all year long, from complaints over placing snow on a neighbour's lawn — or simply not shovelling — to overgrown trees, she said.

Complainants are encouraged to approach their neighbour about their annoyances rather than leaving the task to an outsider.

"If you got a letter in the mail that said: 'One of your neighbours has an issue and would you like to call us so that we can talk about it,' you're going to be defensive right (from) the beginning," Logan said.

"We're trying as much as possible to set a stage from the very beginning that's a stage of collaboration."

Eva Malisius, program head of conflict analysis and management programs at Royal Roads University in Victoria, B.C. said the first step towards resolving a dispute over noise should involve telling a neighbour directly how they've been affected by the disruption.

"Just having that opportunity to hear the other side, usually, neighbours are very open to that. If you do file a complaint, that already escalates it," Malisius said.

Failing that, many communities offer mediation services with a neutral third party offering help, she noted. If all of those steps don't lead to success, then a formal complaint can be an option.

Mediators generally don't try to convince either neighbour that they're right or wrong, Logan said. Instead, they focus on having each side reflect on the situation and determine whether they'd like to address the issue further a position on something — so 'You have to cut the tree' — to a position of 'Why would cutting the tree be of value?' And: 'Is there an alternative to cutting the tree?" Logan said.

Kim Thompson, manager of Pickering's bylaw enforcement services, confirmed that an official complaint has been filed about the Honsberger family but wouldn't go into details about the case. She said no charges have been laid.

"In general, if there's a noise complaint during daytime hours, the complainant has to indicate that they can hear the noise when they're inside their house with all the doors and windows shut," Thompson said.

Honsberger said she hasn't heard anything further from the city or the complaining neighbour, and maintains that the family have and will continue to use their backyard in a "respectful manner." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hops to it: Brew your own to save

FRUGAL FERMENTATION

Why craft beer at home? It's cheaper than bottled water

I have often said that if beer is an acquired taste, then you might as well acquire a taste for cheap beer.

Many brew aficionados would disagree with my assessment of adult beverage choice, claiming instead that something as precious as a lager, stout or ale should be savoured as a delicacy and that intense scrutiny should accompany every sudsy indulgence.

Luckily there is a solution that can satisfy both my quest for fermented frugality and the pristine palate of beer connoisseurs: brewing your own hops-filled master-

A five-gallon beer kit can be purchased for about $30, depending on the recipe you want to brew. Add another $10 for yeast and bottle caps, and the input costs will run you around $40. Five gallons is roughly equivalent to fifty-three bottles of beer. This gives us a per-beer cost of about 75 cents - that's cheaper than bottled water!

In much of Canada, even the cheapest discount beers cost $1.40 per 341 ml serving. The "middle class" of beers such as Labatt Blue or Molson Canadian, often come in around $1.60. This is of course assuming you're purchasing your poison of choice at a vendor and not in a bar or restaurant - where of course the per-serving cost skyrockets.

If we assume that the average beer-drinking Canadian consumes a 12-pack in an average week, and that they prefer a popular domestic vintage, the weekly cost would be $19.20 or just under $1,000 annually. Selfbrewing by comparison could net you the same amount of beer (at a higher alcoholic content if that's what you're into) for $9 a week, or $468 over the course of a year. That's an annual savings of roughly $532 - not counting any drinks you save yourself from purchasing in a bar or club.

There are some initial startup costs and depending on how fancy you want to get, they can range from 50 bucks to more than $200. As always, looking around online or checking out some used equipment can save you some hard-earned cash.

Often you can find brewing kits that have barely been taken out of the box when looking online, and as a one-time cost, it's definitely worth it if you use the kit for a couple of years.

There is no telling how much your own time vs. beer crafting enjoyment value ratio will play into our brewing equation. I know some people who love making their own beer so much that they would pay a premium do so, while others see it as a little hobby that can help them stretch their entertainment budget. Take pride in your brewmaster skills and enjoy one for me this summer, Canada!

CONSTRUCTIVE FEEDBACK

Take criticism in stride and you'll likely face less of it

It's hard enough to take a compliment — but taking critiques can verge on intolerable. Even if it's just one so-so remark on an otherwise glittering performance review, less-than-fuzzy words can still sting. Some of us get defensive; some prefer outright denial. These dodges, however, don't help you improve. The purpose of constructive feedback is to steer employees toward better behaviour — so they won't need as much guidance in the future. Want to hear less criticism? Get better at absorbing it.

When you feel burned, it's tempting to scorch back. Arguduring a planned meeting or an on-the-fly chat, take a moment before you react. Listen to the criticism - not your pounding heart or the voices in your head formulating a slew of sarcastic rebuttals. By maintaining neutrality, you demonstrate that you have the maturity to self-assess.

The really tough part: recognizing when a bad grade is deserved.

As you're hearing the case, weigh its accuracy. Is there validity to the claims? This is the really tough part: recognizing when a bad grade is deserved. Rather than simply agreeing with what's being said, request clarification regarding what went wrong and how it can be corrected. Many managers are just as uncomfortable giving unfavourable feedback as those receiving it, and may want to rush the process. But by calming down, slowing down, and asking thoughtful questions, you can both leave the conversation with concrete ideas for how to move forward.

This doesn't mean you must cheerfully agree when a critique is unfair or untrue. If you believe your low score isn't merited, explain the circumstances but avoid excuses. Acknowledge the bumps in your output — "I agree that project was not as polished as it could have been" — then outline the reasons for your lapse — "At the time I was juggling four clients and had no choice but to prioritize." By recognizing your own slip-ups, you can articulate the backstory without looking like you're trying to skirt blame.

Just as important as accepting pointers: putting them into motion. Post-discussion, prove your receptiveness by proactively targeting your professional weak points. Everyone has areas that need tweaking, and while it may be hard to hear about them, they shouldn't rouse shame. Be gracious during your dialogue, and follow up with prompt, visible action. A Milwaukee Brewers minor leaguer has become the first openly gay player on a team affiliated with Major League Baseball.

David Denson, with the help of former major leaguer Billy Bean, reached out to the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel to tell his story.

The 20-year-old first baseman plays for the Helena Brewers in the rookie Pioneer League. Bean, MI B's first Ambassador for Inclusion, disclosed he is gay after his playing career.

'Talking with my teammates, they gave me the confidence I needed, coming out to them," Denson told the newspaper. "They said. "You're still our teammate. You're still our brother. We kind of had an idea. but your sexuality has nothing to do with your ability. You're still a ballplayer at the end of the day. We don't treat you any different. We've got your back.'

"That was a giant relief for me," he added. "I never wanted to feel like I was forcing it on them. It just happened. The outcome was amazing."

On Sunday, the Brewers lauded Denson as a "highly respected member" of their family and "a very courageous young man."

"Our goal for David is to help develop him into a major league player, just as it is for any player in our system. and we will continue to support him in every way as he chases that dream." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jays swing past Yankees

Win pulls team back to within a half-game of AL East lead

Thanks to a little luck and a lot of good pitching, the Toronto Blue Jays staved off a sweep at the hands of the New York Yankees.

Drew Hutchison turned in his second straight strong start, and the top of the lineup made the most of a ball getting lost in the sun as the Blue Jays beat the Yankees 3-1 Sunday afternoon at Rogers Centre.

Toronto cut New York's lead in the American League East back down to a half-game with seven games left between the division rivals.

In 6-2/3 innings, Hutchison allowed just four base-runners on three hits, including a solo home run. The much-maligned right-hander with a 5-plus earned-run average struck out five to become the 14th pitcher in the majors to hit 12 victories this season.

Hutchison got there because the Blue Jays took advantage of their biggest break of the day, when Yankees left-fielder Carlos Beltran lost a fly ball in the sun in the third inning. Troy Tulowitzki ended up on second with what was later scored a double.

An RBI double by Josh Donaldson got the Blue Jays on the board, and a two-run shot by Jose Bautista, his 28th home run of the season, broke open an inning that could've been over.

Blue Jays starting pitcher Drew Hutchison stretches before his first pitch in Toronto on Sunday. Hutchison pitched 6-2/3 innings, fanning five batters and allowing only three hits before leaving the game in the seventh to a standing ovation.

Base-running blunders kept the Blue Jays from doing any more damage, as did Yankees starter Luis Severino, who struck out a career-high nine in his third major-league start.

Hutchison helped the Blue

Jays (65-54) make some more history of their own. He made it the 20th straight game that the starting pitcher allowed three or fewer earned runs, extending a franchise-record set Saturday.

The 24-year-old left to a rousing standing ovation from the sellout crowd of 46,792. Relievers Brett Cecil, Aaron Sanchez and Robert Osuna finished the Yankees (64-52) off to make the Blue Jays 15-3 since making a flurry of trades in late July. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Murray edges past Djokovic; Bencic upsets Halep in finals

Andy Murray defeated Novak Djokovic 6-4, 4-6, 6-3 to win the US$4.1-million Rogers Cup on Sunday, ending an eight-match losing streak to the world's topranked player.

Second-seeded Murray posted his fourth tournament victory of the year. He won $685,200 for claiming the Rogers Cup for a third time after hoisting the trophy in 2009 and 2010. His three wins tie Djokovic, Rafael Nadal and Andre Agassi for second place all-time behind Ivan Lendl's six victories.

The two top seeds split the first two sets in a three-hour match in hot, muggy conditions at Uniprix Stadium. It played out with Murray serving at 3-1 in the third, already up a break.

Djokovic had two more break points in the final game, but Murray pounded two service winners and eventually won when Djokovic hit a ground

Stephanie Dixon remembers returning home from the 2000 Paralympics in Sydney, and being unable to celebrate her successes with anyone.

Nobody knew what Paralympic sport was.

But the victory of these Games wasn't just about medals won, but about the fans won over along the way. The victory was in the jam-packed crowd that watched Canada's wheelchair rugby team beat the U.S. for gold, and a similarly large and noisy crowd that cheered on Canada's wheelchair basketball teams, which both came away with silver

Record-breaking Aussie Jason has his Day in sun

Jason Day led wire-to-wire Sunday at Whistling Straits to close out a record-setting PGA Championship and capture his first major title.

The 27-year-old Australian finished at 20-under 268 to beat Jordan Spieth by three shots. Day is the first player to finish at 20 under in a major.

Day shot 5-under 67, and never let Spieth get closer than two shots. Branden Grace finished third and Justin Rose was fourth.

A nice ending to the major season for a player who has endured some close calls and his share of heartache.

At the U.S. Open in June, he fell while walking during the second round. He had vertigo symptoms. But he played through the weekend and actually held a share of the lead after 54 holes before fading on Sunday.

At the British Open, he also was in the lead after 54 holes but ended up one shot out of a playoff. He closed the deal this time.

This was Day's 10th top-10 finish at a major. His first came here, in Wisconsin, at the 2010 PGA.

Earlier this week, Day said he knew if he kept putting himself in position, he'd eventually break through.

He was tearing up as he waited to hit the tap-in putt that would seal the victory. He did it, then raised both fists and buried his face in his caddie's shoulder. His son, Dash, ran to the 18th green to celebrate and Day carried him off the green. Soon, he'll cradle the Wanamaker Trophy. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canadian teen wins LPGA event

Brooke Henderson won the Cambia Portland Classic by eight strokes Sunday to become the third-youngest champion in LPGA Tour history at 17 years, 11 months, 6 days.

The Canadian from Smiths Falls, Ont., closed with a 3-under 69 at Columbia Edgewater to finish at 21-under 267, the lowest total since the event went from 54 holes to 72 in 2013.

Lydia Ko set the age record as an amateur in the 2012 Canadian Women's Open at 15 years, 4 months, 2 days. She also won the Canadian event in 2013 at 16, and won four times at 17. Lexi Thompson won the 2011 Navistar LPGA Classic at 16 years, 7 months, 8 days. Henderson's eight-stroke margin is the largest in the history of the event and the biggest on the LPGA Tour since Jiyah Shin won the 2012 Women's British Open by nine shots.

Henderson also became the first Canadian winner since Lorie Kane in the 2001 Takefuji Classic and joined Laurel Kean as other only Monday qualifiers to win. Kean accomplished the feat in the 2000 Rail Classic.

Henderson earned $195,000 and has made $661,818 in 10 events this year. Last year, LPGA Tour Commissioner Mike Whan denied Henderson's age petition, preventing her from playing Qschool. Because she's assured of finishing among the top 40 in earnings this year, Henderson will earn a tour card for 2016.

Henderson bogeyed the final hole, only her third dropped stroke of the week, and had 24 birdies. She got into the field Monday with a 68, then shot 66-67-65 to take a five-stroke lead into the final round.

Salt and pepper

Directions

1. Cook pasta in boiling water according to package directions. In last two minutes, add snap peas and cook just until crisp. Drain, saving 1/4 cup of the pasta water. Rinse pasta with cold water until pasta and peas are no longer warm. Add to serving bowl along with reserved water, tomatoes, feta and dill.

2. Add ingredients for dressing and mix well.

* IT'S ALL IN THE STARS by Sally Brompton

Aries March 21 - April 20 It's no big deal if you feel a bit left out. You are sending out signals to those around you that you don't want to be bothered too much and friends and colleagues are simply respecting your unspoken wishes.

Taurus April 21 - May 21 You will be put to the test and pass with flying colors. No matter how big the challenge you are big enough to meet it. You were born to lead and you were born to succeed.

Gemini May 22 - June 21 Some intense cosmic activity will encourage you to deal with events you usually avoid. Chances are you will deal with them so well, you'll wonder what all the fuss was about.

Cancer June 22 - July 23 The planets promise success and riches bevond vour wildest dreams. Okay, so maybe it won't be quite that spectacular but it will be worth having. Don't get carried away though.

What took so much effort to acquire won't take much effort to lose.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23 A feud that has taken up too much time and energy must be resolved. Today's planetary set-up will give you the courage to make changes. Hopefully others will accept them.

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23 You like to be in control but that may not be possible today. If you are smart you will let others take the wheel. Yes, you will enjoy the ride.

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23 You need to scale down your ambitions a bit. Don't think of it as giving up things you like, think of it as making more room for things you love.

M Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22 If your private life is in a bit of a mess then now is the time to sort it out. The planets will help you make necessary changes but you have got to be honest with those you love. Don't just tell them what they want to hear.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21 For some strange reason you seem to believe that you are not really good enough to compete at the highest level, but nothing could be further from the truth. You have so much talent at your disposal.

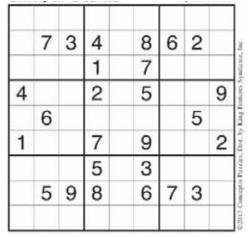

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20 So many things are changing but the long-term results will be favourable. A week or so from now you will have a much more positive view of what is going on.

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19 Do everything in your power to get along with partners, colleagues and employers. You must to be willing to compromise, even if it means you get slightly less while they get more.

Pisces Feb. 20 - March 20 Personal matters are causing you a lot of concern and things are likely to come to a head when the Sun links with Saturn at the end of the week. Between now and then be good to yourself and get plenty of rest.
